A court in Athens on Monday sentenced a Greek man to life in prison for killing an Israeli student in an Athens park in May, in what police described as a racially motivated act. The decision is a rare conviction for a white Greek in a racially motivated killing. The 29-year-old defendant, who cannot be named under Greek law because he has not yet been tried, admitted to the crime but argued that he acted in self-defense. He told the court he had been attacked with a knife by a 17-year-old Palestinian. The verdict was the first after a high-profile trial, but does not close the case. The defendant could appeal, the court said. Former Gov. Rod
