that the trial court should have sustained the objections. But for that error, the issue of whether the office was unconscionable was not an issue in the case, and we cannot say that the error was one which was likely to affect the result of the trial on the merits.

Tex.R.Civ.P. 434. The same reasoning applies with even more force to the question of the jury's finding of the existence of fraud in the execution, although it was the subject of a complete statement of facts. The vice, if any, in the finding of that issue was not an issue in the case, and the error was not one which was likely to affect the result of the trial of the case on its merits. Since the entire case was tried by consent, we do not reach any of the other issues, for the simple reason that they were not in issue. However, we will indulge in a brief discussion of the question of damages for the *114 purpose of affirming the judgment for the reasons given by the District Court. In the area of a real estate contract, damages are usually measured by the difference between the contract price and the value of the property if it had been performed. If, as here, the defaulting party claims the property should have been worth more than its contract price, the proper measure of damages would be the difference between the contract price and the property's value at the time the default occurred. Castle v. Bounds, 96 Tex. 92, 70 S.W. 937 (1902); McPherson v. Thompson, 381 S.W.2d 129 (Tex.Civ.App. [?] Dallas 1964, no writ). In this case, the parties stipulated that the price of the property was $67,500. The testimony at trial was to the effect that the property was worth $69,000 when the default occurred. Under the evidence, as stipulated, the trial court's award of $75,000 as damages was proper. We are not disposed to disturb it on appeal. The judgment of the trial court is affirmed.

Drug Warrior gun registration proposal in Aroostook County, Maine, has collapsed. Conservative Maine blogger Ben Gazzara broke the story. Let's take a look at the Supreme Court decision and the backstory. Three Strikes: Gun registration on the ballot in Maine Back in March, retired police officer and current state representative, David Trahan, filed a ballot measure called Three Strikes that would have required that gun owners go through the process of registering their guns, every 10 years or risk having their weapons confiscated. Basically, if you wanted to own a gun, you'd have to go through the process, which would include background checks, fingerprinting, a waiting period, and most importantly, $150. The new law wouldn't have kicked in for two years, which is why Trahan was going after retired police officer and current state representative David Trahan. In theory, the good did outweigh the harm as registered guns don't turn up in criminal searches. But the gun owners of Maine pretty much hate the idea. And they were very organized. According to local news, 5,000 people had registered to vote by the time of the primary, which means the measure could
